ADMIRAL PORTER'S SON

Relutes the Statements Made By Gen. Butler in His Book.

SAYS THE ATTACK ON HIS FATHER

By the General Was Inspired By Malice-The Esteem in Which the Admiral Was Held by the Government a Sufficient Vindication--Ills Officers May Have Something to Say on Their Own Account.

BALTIMORE, MD., Feb. 1 .- Mr. David Essex Porter, son of the late Admiral Porter, who was seen in Baltimore by a representative of the Baltimore Sun. was questioned in reference to the statements and criticisms made of his father in Gen. Benjamin Butler's book. Mr. Porter said:

"In his book of the war my father did not hesitate to criticise Butler and give his estimate of the man in free language. In regard to that portion of the book in which Butler alludes to the 'untruthful and vilainous' statements of late Admiral Porter concerning the capture and surrender of Forts St. Phillip and Jackson, below New Orleans, and also imputing cowardice to my father, I have only to say that during the war my father received four votes of thanks from Congress for conspicuous conduct, each vote giving him the privilege of remaining on the active list of the may ten additional years after arriving at the goo of the privileze of remaining on the active list of the navy ten additional years after arriving at the age of sixty-two years. This was one vote more than was accorded to either Grant or Farragut, and will hardly sustain in the minds of American people the accusations of untruthinlness and villainy sought to be applied to him by Butler. Moreover, after the capture of New Orleans Congress honored my father with the rank of acting rear admiral, and Mr. Gideon Welles, the then secretary of the navy. of acting rear admiral, and Mr. Gideon Welles, the then secretary of the mavy, ordered him to the command of the upper Mississippi squadron. It is known that Secretary Welles did not feel friendly towards my father, and if there had been any foundation for the charge of villainy and cowardice in his conduct the secretary would have been only too glad to lessen the admiral's influence rather than increase it by so important glad to lessen the admiral's influence rather than increase it by so important a command. This should be sufficient to refute the charge the brave truthful and only strategic general that the late war produced has imputed to Admiral Porter. A book giving the life of my father is now in preparation by Assistant-Secretary of the Navy Soley. The work will contain an accurate history of the circumstance that Butler calls untruthful and villai nous. This will be the last statement in refer-This will be the last statement in reference to Ben Butler's book that will come from any member of Admiral Porter's family. I do not doubt, however, that the officers who served under Admiral Porter, many of whom are still living, and who come in for a share of Butler's strictures and animosity will have something to say in their own and the admiral's defence when the matter is brought to their, attention? is brought to their attention."

IN FAVOR OF BOYD.

The United States Supreme Court Decides He is Entitled to the Nebraska Gover-

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 1 .- The United States surpreme court to-day decided in favor of Boyd in the Nebraska governorship case. All the justices except Justice Field concurred in tices except Justice Field concurred in the conclusion of the court that Boyd was a citizen of the United States and entitled to the office of governor of Ne-braska. Justices Harlan, Gray and Brown concurred in that part of the opinion which held that Boyd was a citizen from the record in the case. It must be considered as established that Boyd's father exercised all rights of a citizen, had, in het, in 1854, taken out his final naturalization papers, not-withstanding he did not have the record of such final naturalization papers.

The court also held that there was such a thing as collective naturalization; that the enabling act of Nebraska constituted a naturalization of all the inhabitants of Nebraska at the time of its stituted a naturalization of all the inhabitants of Nebraska at the time of its admission, except such as desired to retain their toreign rights, and that Boyd's acceptance of offices showed intention to become a citizen. Opinion by Chief Justices Fuller.

Justices Harlan, Gray and Brown, while concurring in the conclusion of the court that Boyd was a citizen of the United States, did so on the ground of the exercise of all the rights and privileges of citizenship by Boyd's father, a resident of Ohio, as shown on the record established and the assertion made by James E. Boyd and his father that the latter had in 1855 taken out his final naturalization papers, although there is no documentary proof of the issuance of those papers.

These three justices, although that fact was not stated in so many words by the court, did not assent to the conclusion reached by the other justices, that Boyd was also a citizen on another ground, viz, that the enabling act of Nebraska caused a collective naturalization of all inhabitants thereof at the time of its admission into the union, except such as announced that they intended to retain rights as citizens or subjects of a foreign nation, and that the tended to retain rights as citizens or subjects of a foreign nation, and that the various offices held by Boyd and the exercise of the right of suffrage by him with the oaths of allegiance to the United States he took at the various times shows clearly that it was his intention to become a citizen of the United States, and that in fact he so considered himself.

The court says that on January 13, 1891. tended to retain rights as citizens or The court says that on January 13, 1891, leave was granted to John M. Thayer by the supreme court of Nebraska to file proceedings looking to the ousting of Boyd from the office of governor of Nebriska. The court then reviews the charge in information filed by Thayer. The point, as is well known, is that Boyd's father, although he had declared his intention to become a citizen clared his intention to become a citizen of the United States, and had in Ohio for years exercised unquestioned rights of voting and holding office, had in fact never had his final naturalization papers and was therefore not a citizen, and that as James E. Boyd himself had never been naturalized, but had voted and held office under this belief; that his father became a naturalized citizen while he was a minor; that, therefore, under the became a naturalized citizen while he was a minor; that, therefore, under the constitution, James E. Boyd was not a citizen, and therefore not eligible to the office of governor of Nebraska, the state constitution requiring that the governor shall be a citizen of the state for at least two years preceding his election. Boyd, in his reply, claimed that the enabling; act of Nebraska constituted a collective naturalization of all tuted a collective naturalization of all its inhabitants at the time of admission to statehood, and also asserted that his father had, in 1854, taken out his final naturalization papers, although the rec-ord did not show such a fact.

The court first devotes some space to an agrument in support of its right of jurisdiction under the mode of proced-ure under which the case comes before it, reaching the conclusion that while the attorney-general of the state re-fused to institute a suit against Boyd, Thayer, as the aggreeded party, had a right to bring the suit in the nominal right to bring the suit in the nominal name of the attendant and the question being one of a denial of a constitutional right. Boyd had made a federal question which could be reviewed here. The court says it understands it is insisted that Boyd was an alien, because of his disabilities as a foreign born citizen had never been removed by maturalization. Congress, it says, in the exercise of the power to establish a uniform rule of naturalization of individuals, but that the instances of collective naturalization by treaty or ctive naturalization by treaty or statute are not numerous.

THE ANTI-LOTTERY LAW

Declared Constitutional By the United States Supreme Court.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 1.—The United States Supreme Court to-day upheld the constitutionality of the recent anti-lottery act of the last Congress, Affirming the decision in the case of Deyne and Rapeir, the publishers of the New Orleans States and Mobile Register, who were indicted on charges of sending through the mails newspapers containing lottery advertisements. By test units as to the constitutionality of the law.
Chief Justice Fuller announced that Chief Justice Fuller announced that owing to the death of Justice Bradley, to whom the writing of the opinion in the anti-lottery cases had been given, the court would postpone any elaboration of its views and confine itself to the expression of the general ground on which the decision proceeds. The court then said that the opinion in exparted Jackson held that the power vested in Congress to established post offices and post roads embraced the regulation of the postal system of the country and designated what may and what may not be excluded. The power granted Congress was complete and carried with it power to forbid the use of mails in aid of perpetration of crime or immorality. of perpetration of crime or immorality. of perpetration of time or immoranty. The court says there is no distinction between mala prohibita and mala into and that it must be left to Congress in exercise of a sound discretion to determine what shall be excluded. There is no abridgement of the freedom of the no apringement of the freedom of the press for the reason that the govern-ment does not prohibit communication by other means, but simply through the government agencies which con-trol trol.

THE MONONGAH COAL BOYCOTT. The Trades Assembly Replies to General

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

To the Elitor of the Intelligencer.

DEAR SIR:—In a letter over the signature of General Manager Spillman in your issue of the 26th inst. that gentleman denounces the Trades Assembly for boyeotting the product of the Monongah mines, and also charges the committee of the Trades Assembly with a contortion of facts in publishing a list of cleven names taken from sixty or seventy published by Mr. Crumbacker. Now, the facts are, the list published by us was furnished by a reliable person conversant with the circumstances, but happened to correspond with some but happened to correspond with some but happened to correspond with some names on a list of 36 miners published by Mr. Crumbacker on Monday, January 11, in the Dally Intelligence.

Again, he refers to us as liars and law breakers, for branding the company's store as a "Pluck Me" store. We have no reason for changing our opinion on that point; from information furnished us by persons conversant with the facts we still adhere to our former declarations.

we still adhere to our former declarations.

Mr. Spilman, referring to us, says:

"Are they in fact trying to accomplish anything in which the people of Wheeling are interested? Yes, they are trying to keep out of Wheeling this cheaper and better coal." In answer we would say the retail merchants of Wheeling are interested in the fair wages earned by her five or six thousand organized workmen, for we know of no city in this Union that has less extremely wealthy citizens and fewer poor, with as many well paid and contented wage-carners, as the city of Wheeling. Now, in order to give this "cheaper coal" to Wheeling they ride into competition on the backs of their employes. That means to them less consumptive power, and in turn means disaster to the home miners who are receiving union wages; it means less trade to their employers; to the miners it means more idleness, less consumption and lower wages. Do the retail merchants of Wheeling think it economical to limit the purchasing powers of its wage-carners?

The interest of the different industries are so closely interwoven that what injures one effect others, if one manufacof its wage-carners?

The interest of the different industries' are so closely interwoyen that what injures one effect others, if one manufacturer reduces wages, others will.

We hold that the workman shall have a voice as to what his labor is worth; a partner to a transaction that to him is of vital importance.

Of the three factors in the production of wealth, land, laborand capital, laboris the active and the most important factor. Let us see how the Monongah Company treats with its employes. When they concluded to organize for self protection, they were told their organization would not be recognized, and the company would treat with them as individuals only. Now when they offer his their coal they appeal to our State pride, as if trade and commerce were conducted on geographical lines. While we are proud of our little Mountain State with her many natural opportunities from which labor can produce wealth, we don't want these opportunities monopolized and every avenue to self-employment of labor cut off so that even the figures on our State arms would be caricatures and our motto a snare and a delusion.

We deplore the necessity of strikes a snare and a delusion.

We deplore the necessity of strikes and boycotts; they sometimes incur a fearful waste of energy and a great loss of money, but in the absence of more available remedies to enforce our rights, we will continue to use them.

"With the accumulation of wisdom and judgement" the economic education of the workingman is rapid, and many of the workingman is rapid, and many to-day recognize that they have an inalicable inheritance and right to a share for use, of the soil, that the right to live carries with it the right to the means of living, and that all statutes that obstruct or deny these rights are wrong. The working classes are discussing these questions; they engender thought and reasoning, from cause to effect, and will in the end prevail long after the bugle notes of the task master have died away, and his imperious mandates buried in oblivion, will these principles exist and remain a living truth. We have no issue with the Monongah Company, nor Manager Spillman, principles exist and remain a first. Truth. We have no issue with the Monongah Company, nor Manager Spillman, other than the removal of these unjust conditions. Before parting, however, we unite in our thanks to Manager Spillman for his appreciation of our work in advertising his coal, and we convey to him assurance that we will continue in the good work.

Very Respectfully, etc.,

ARBITRATION COMMITTEE of Ohio Valley Trades and Labor Assembly,

Contractors Will Undertake to Fight Union Men on a Railroad.

BUTTE, MONT., Feb. 1 .- A short time ago a contract to construct a spur from the main line of the Montana Central railroad to the Boston and Montana mines was taken by Foley Bros. & Guthrie. Last week they brought 100 men here to begin work at less than union wages. The labor unions of Butte, Centerville and Walkerville objected and yesterday afternoon got together 2,000 men and marched them to Foley & Guthrie's camp. A conference re-sulted in the 100 men surrending to the union force. Contractor Guthrie says the war is only begun.
